Partnership helps fill training needs

SCC partners with Cherokee Indian Hospital Authority to fill essential training needs

Much like every other healthcare system and facility in the country, the Cherokee Indian Hospital Authority has a tremendous need for trained and skilled professionals - particularly Certified Medical Assistants.

To help address that need, Southwestern Community College has partnered with Career Step to provide training for existing employees at Cherokee Indian Hospital.

"One of the greatest benefits to both the hospital and their employees is that we're able to offer this training directly on their campus," said Scott Sutton, SCC's Dean of Workforce Continuing Education.

The training takes 10 months and prepares participants to become Certified Clinical Medical Assistants (CCMAs) and Certified Medical Administrative Assistants (CMAAs).

Daily tasks are screening patients, case management, providing immunizations, referrals and serving as a liaison between the provider and patients.

Janet Medford, who is the hospital's Director of Nursing, said the program benefits both the employees and the providers who'll hire them.

"We are providing this program so that these employees have job-growth opportunities," Medford said. "There's a tremendous need for CCMAs and CMAAs among our primary care providers right now. So once these students graduate, they'll be able to apply for those positions."

Jimmy Arch

Sonya Arch is a Whittier Resident and certified nursing assistant who has been in the Cherokee Indian Hospital's medical assistant program for seven months.

While working toward her certification, Arch has continued serving the hospital as an orthopedic tech.

"The program itself has been real good. It's fast-paced. I'm learning a lot, and I've really enjoyed it," Arch said. "It gives you a greater knowledge of what goes on behind the scenes. Even though we're behind the scenes, we get to do the most work with patients. You see them on a daily basis and screen them for the provider. It gets you more in touch with the patients and allows you to get to know them better."

Her husband Jimmy Arch has worked at the hospital for approximately 10 years. He started out in patient registration, then moved to the front desk for the dental clinic and currently works in nursing education - but he never really had a lot of medical experience prior to enrolling in the program.

"I've gained a lot of experience here at CIHA working my way up through various departments," Jimmy Arch said. "This program has been a great opportunity to elevate my knowledge base and continue to make a positive impact in the lives of our patients."

For more information, contact Latresa Shuler at 828.339.4425 or lsuler@SouthwesternCC.edu.

SCC TRANSFORMS LANDSCAPE OF LAW ENFORCEMENT TRAINING

Throughout his career of training law enforcement professionals, Mitch Boudrot has increasingly recognized the need for a realistic, simulated environment to prepare both current and aspiring officers for what they'll one day face in the field.

While some larger institutions have constructed multi-million dollar indoor facilities to keep trainees out of the elements, Boudrot knew that was not financially possible in the case of Southwestern Community College.

Nor, in his view, would a heated and air-conditioned space be ideal for what needs to be accomplished.

"Law enforcement does not take place in ideal, comfortable conditions," said Boudrot, the Law Enforcement Training Program Director for SCC's Public Safety Training Center in Franklin. "When responding to a call, you're slogging through the mud, snow, rain or oppressive heat. If our recruits and officers are going to remain effective and vigilant, they need to train in the same elements in which they will work on their worst day."

The SCC-PSTC's new Law Enforcement Operations Urban Terrain (LEOUT) accomplishes exactly that for Boudrot, and – more importantly – everyone who trains there. The course features 43 metal Conex (shipping) containers, which are laid out strategically near SCC's driver-training range.

The facility also includes abandoned vehicles and gas pumps to simulate a small-town layout.

"We at SCC-PSTC are honored to serve those who serve," said Curtis Dowdle, Dean of Public Safety Training for SCC. "We are thankful for the support we have from our SCC administration, county and state elected officials that invest in training and education for public safety. We are also grateful for the partnership and collaboration we have with all our public safety agencies at the municipal, county, state and federal levels. LEOUT allows us to provide practical, realistic training that will ultimately benefit the communities our first responders serve in."

On Friday, March 24, SCC welcomed elected officials to tour the LEOUT facility and observe live training. State Representatives Karl Gillespie, who represents District 120, and Mike Clampitt of District 119, saw local law enforcement officers go through multiple scenarios.

"This is truly a one-of-a-kind facility that all of our communities can be proud of, and we all certainly benefit from the training that takes place here," said Dr. Don Tomas, SCC's President. "We are extremely thankful to Rep. Gillespie, whose district includes Macon County, for helping to secure the funding necessary to create LEOUT. We are grateful for all our elected officials, who support us throughout the year."

Boudrot and LETP instructors are able to create a variety of scenarios from those involving criminal investigations and crime scene processing, traffic crash investigation, domestic violence, crowd management, active shooter and hostage situations, specialized & advanced tactical training, dignitary protection, patrol skills, and much more during academy sessions and in-service training provided to local law enforcement agencies. Plus, EMS and Fire-Rescue are able to cross-train within the facility.

"As a firearms instructor, I can say this new addition to SCC's training resources will be an asset to our local law enforcement community," said Tim Lominac, Town of Murphy Chief of Police. "The type of training that will be offered will assist multiple small agencies and departments to be trained and operate in a uniformed manner. In the unfortunate event of an active shooter, this type of training will put multiple agencies and departments operating as a team to secure a building (or buildings) and to neutralize the threat at hand."

Southwestern's National Park Service and Basic Law Enforcement Training recruits are already training there as are sworn officers in area sheriff's and police departments. Much like the officers who train there, the LEOUT will always be a work in progress.
