

Your first year at Southwestern Community College can be overwhelming, whether you're new to the college experience, a transfer student, dually enrolled or attending Early College.

Where do you start? You've registered for classes, you've accessed the MySCC portal, you've visited Moodle and you've heard of the Learning Assistance Centers, but you may not have found all the tools you need to be successful.

What about Holt Library? It's located on the Jackson campus, but the library is more than just books on shelves. You can access our resources and services from anywhere.

The Holt Library website is accessible through the MySCC portal where you can find resources and information to help you with research and course assignments. (Login/find us) You can find books, e-books, peer-reviewed articles, news and practice tests.

Most of these sources can be found through OneSearch.

You can access books from other libraries by placing a hold or calling the library if you don't find the book in Holt Library's catalog.

Use the online form to register your library card to check out books and request books from another library.

The website has plenty of resources for research, citation assistance, and how to start your research assignments.

There's also information about all of our services.

The library is a key to your success.

Students from the Macon and Swain Campuses are able to pick up books at their campus receptionist's desks. Whether online or on campus, the library is always at your fingertips.

The staff is very friendly. They love talking to students and will assist students with research questions and resources. You may also see the instruction librarian in your classes. She is ready to help students with course assignments.

The library has plenty of private and public space for studying and tutoring. Students can hang out to work on group projects, socialize, or to work on assignments individually. You can also book a study room for two hours at a time. Just contact the library to book a room!

If you need to print or copy--these services are free at the library. You can also scan documents directly to your email.

There are desktops for student use.

Need a quiet place to study? The library has a quiet zone that is first come, first serve for when you need to study for exams or work on getting assignments completed, and, of course, for reading!

You can visit the library in person. The library is open Monday through Thursday 8am-6pm and Friday 8am-3pm. Or you can chat with librarians 24/7 via MySCC portal, or contact them by email or phone.

There are also library guides available on the library's website that can help you get started with research anytime!

Check the library's website for updates to our services and upcoming events such as game nights, monthly displays and join our book club!

The library wants you to be successful..
